15-5-92,

Dear Scotty,

*Sirkka Stenersen's
widower.
(Omolt - Jensen & family)*

Thanks very much for your letter. We are pleased to learn that you are doing fine and are all set for the great reunion.

You asked us to bring you up-to-date on our little family and especially what I have been up to since the last reunion.

It came as a shock to us all that Sirkka learned that she had contracted Parkinson's disease and would gradually become completely helpless. She was almost 12 years younger than I and it had always been taken for granted that she in due time would be looking after me.

It was a tremendous adjustment for her, a sports girl, and her greatest worry was to reach the state when she would be completely helpless and a burden to her surroundings as she termed it.

However, long before she came to this stage she quite unexpectedly passed away in her sleep at home on November 20th 1986, only 67 years old.

I was away in Norway in connection with the publishing of my book: "Ole Reistad - The Spirit of "Little Norway"". It was a biography of the Commanding Officer for the Norwegian Air Force Training Centre in Canada in the 2nd World War. He was an Olympic gold medalist and a folk hero in Norway, and died very untimely right after the war.

In 1988 I published another book in Norwegian: "En Rar Tid", "Strange Times". It was a combination of a family book and a description of the daily and political life in Norway over the last two hundred years.

The book also describes what Canada looked like to a young Norwegian airman suddenly faced with the daily life there in the forties, especially in "Toronto the Good" and the wonders of the "Two Solitudes", for instance what was permissible in Toronto but not in Montreal and what was permissible in Montreal but not in Toronto, all told with a gleam in the eye. You could go to a movie on Sunday but not before five minutes after twelve midnight, and have your whiskey and soda at the Royal York if you brought the whiskey yourself under the table etc..

There is also a positive but not too serious description of the Y W C A, how I met Sirkka and further developments until we returned to Canada in 1948.

After some operational flying in Norway during the two months of invasion in 1940 I was put in front of a desk in Little Norway, and one of my strange jobs was to try to prevent marriages between Norwegian pilots under training and Canadian girls. This would have been wonderful in peace time, said the Commanding Officer, but we are few and our pilots have to be so much more aggressive in combat. If they get married and get family responsibilities they might be more careful. However, about 200 boys were charmed right up to the altar, and I was so successful in preventing these marriages that I got married to a Canadian girl myself.

The boys, by the way, didn't do too badly in combat. In 1943 one all-Norwegian Spitfire fighter squadron was officially credited by the Royal Air Force for having shot down the highest number of enemy planes of all Royal Air Force fighter squadrons that year.

You ask me about my age and mountain climbing, Scotty. I must warn you that the only thing that does not deteriorate with age is the ability to boast. I am getting rather better at it each year.

I am still the oldest Coureur de Bois (68 at the time) to ski 160 kilometers over two days under a given maximum skiing time in the yearly Canadian Ski Marathon. But as I grew older mountain climbing was less dangerous when you avoided hanging in ropes. Galdhøypiggen is only 8,000 feet, and easy to climb, but it is Norway's highest, which sounds quite impressive. After 80 this climb is a good check-up on the heart.

I made it to the top on my 80th birthday (born August 3rd 1907) and the year after. On the second trip we went up the last day anyone was permitted to go up, the fourth of September. Close to the top we were surprised by a ferocious ice cold snowstorm and I wouldn't have made it without Lynn who also carried a packsac with extra clothing and quick energy food. Although I train year round I am not sure what the outcome will be this August, but 85 is no excuse for not trying. It takes a total of 8 hours to climb up and down again.

Sirkka was a very out-going person with lots of friends and activities. There was therefore quite a mixed crowd at her funeral from different religious camps. Our oldest son Jarl with his long experience from radio and TV work made a good diplomatic speech. One young land developer came over to him afterwards and said: "I listened to your speech and I would like to hire you for my own funeral!"

Jarl has been into competitive skiing and broadcasting work now for around 25 years. He has retired from these activities and turned his energies and talent towards religious endeavours. He lives near Mayerthorpe in Alberta and is married to a school teacher Tony Bishop. They have no children.

Kent specialized in computer programming after completing university. After stints in the Civil Service he is now working for one of the leading computer firms in Ottawa called Corel. He has built a house close to us and is married to a medical doctor Gayle Ekstrand who has her own practice in family medicine in Ottawa. They have no children.

Lynn followed in her mothers footsteps and graduated from the University of Ottawa in Physical Education. We have got a new speed way now to Ottawa reducing the travelling time to 15 minutes. Living right in the bush at Kirk's Ferry with all sports facilities for summer and winter only minutes away, she shares the house with the old man and commutes to town. She is single.

I am more the hermit type and live alone to quite an extent. Besides a land development of about 3000 acres on the other side of the Gatineau river which I have been involved with since we started it in 1968, I am pursuing a new hobby called: Comparative Religion. It sounds fitting for a man in his eighties to be interested in religion. However, it is a secular science concerning only the history of the various religions. It is an immense amount of material to go through so it will take some time to get a reasonable short book out of it, but it will be in English with the help of an expert to polish my failing expertise in Her Majesty's language. If you should ever read the product, you will be surprised to learn what the Bible says about women, and how the various religions have been used to keep women in line. As you might suspect if the book had come out some two hundred years ago, I would surely been burnt at the stake, or "to a steak" as the Scottish schoolboy wrote about Joan of Arc.

With the very best wishes for your 50th reunion

Dear Pauline - & all.

How enterprising of you to instigate a 50 Reunion, though I'm sure it can't be that long! We are all far too young! Sorry I can't join in. I have been back to Toronto once (15 yrs ago) & hardly recognised it, but it is certainly a super, progressive city.

It was good to see the list of fellow classmates, & you can now add my address to your file. We have been here since 1976, a lovely little village, near the Yorkshire moors so we are well settled. Andrew is a retired solicitor, but still has quite a lot to do. I am still one of those peculiarly British 'oddities' - a lay magistrate, & sit in court once or twice a week. Interesting work, but I retire this summer (when I will be 70).

Both our offspring live within a few miles, so we keep in touch & see the grandchildren quite often which keeps us busy.

And that just about sums up the
